Governor Bill Richardson starts book tour

SANTA FE - Governor Bill Richardson on Friday will start a promotional tour for his new book, "Between Worlds," which was released this week. The Governor will take vacation time while he is on the tour.

The Governor will participate in several promotional events in New York, Washington, D.C., and Philadelphia. He will appear on several national television and radio shows, including "Imus in the Morning," PBS's "The Charlie Rose Show," CNN's "American Morning," and MSNBC's "Hardball with Chris Matthews."

Governor Richardson will donate a portion of the royalties from the sale of his book to the New Mexico Lottery Success Scholarship program.

Putman Books is paying for the Governor's travel. The Governor will return to Santa Fe on Tuesday.
