Governor Bill Richardson's State of the State Speech to be Shown Live on Web

First time for NM State of the State speech

SANTA FE- Governor Bill Richardson's speech during the opening session of the 2006 New Mexico Legislature will be broadcast live on the Internet, the first State of the State speech by a New Mexico governor to be available live on the Web.

"I'm proud to utilize this innovative technology to give New Mexicans who can't be here in person the opportunity to see my State of the State speech on the Internet," said Governor Richardson. "This marks the beginning of a very important legislative session, and I will detail my plans to keep moving New Mexico forward. I encourage everyone to watch."

Governor Richardson's State of the State speech can be viewed on the internet by going to the Governor's Web site www.governor.state.nm.us and then clicking on the link provided on the home page.

For those who cannot watch live, a recording of the speech will also be available on the Governor's Web site following the opening session.

The audio and video feed for the webcast of the speech are being provided by KNME-TV.
