Governor Bill Richardson Releases Statement on Increasing Personnel at White Sands Missile Range

SANTA FE - Governor Bill Richardson released the following statement today on the potential relocation of United States Army units to White Sands Missile Range, near Alamogordo. The plan is part of the Base Realignment and Closure-directed realignments.

“We have worked hard to keep New Mexico’s bases open,” said Governor Richardson. “I am pleased that the United States Army sees the potential at White Sands Missile Range and wants to relocate nearly 4000 men and women to the base. Expanding the personnel at White Sands Missile Range is encouraging news for the people of Southern New Mexico.”
